This portrait of the lost French convict saved by the resourceful and independent Australian woman can be seen to have helped reinforce the notion of the superiority of Australian society over its New Caledonian neighbour and, in turn, served to exonerate Australian settler colonialism from its dark past of convict labour and Indigenous dispossession. Until our next conversation. Dora surfed with consummate elegance, talked philosophy on the beach with Henry Miller, and scorned mainstream society with a dark, existential wit, making no apologies for a life that revolved purely around surfing. All staff take responsibility for monitoring feeding and are expected to ask the Introduction to Oncogenes and Molecular Cancer Medicine.
